O. E. MURRAY & CO., 1806 Market Street FOOT BALL AS THE GIRLS SEE IT.

I took the gantle Annabel
To see a foot ball game.
And thus unto a friend of hers
Did she describe the same:

"Oh, May, you should have seen them play,
"Twas such a lovely sight!
And though the first game 1 had seen
I understood it quite.

"First came the Vales, all dressed in blue, Then Harvard came in red. One fellowyelled, the rest all tried To jump upon his head.

"And then one fellow stopped and stooped, And all the rest got round: And every fellow stopped and stooped And looked hard at the ground.

"And then another fellow yelled, And each man, where he stood, Just hit and struck and knocked and kicked At every one he could.

"And then one fell upon his neck, And all the others ran. And on his prope and prostrate form Leaped every blessed man.

"And then the ambulance drove on, And loading up with men, With twisted necks and broken lungs, Went driving off again.

"Oh foot ball's just the cutest game! It can not be surpassed: But yet it really is a shame To use up men so fast."

TALE OF A WEDDING RING.

How Justice Thomas F. Grady Made a Poor Woman Happy.

New York Advertiser.

In the porch of the Tombs there stood for two hours yesterday, a sad, worn woman, with a baby in her arms. The baby was chubby and healthy. It yelled lustily to get down on the cold stone pavement. Hurrying lawcold stone pavement. Hurrying lawyers elbowed the woman out of the way, frowsy men and women jostled against her. At brief intervals she peered into the crowded courtroom.
Just before the court adjourned she mustered up courage enough to step inside. When all the cases had been disposed of, a court officer shouted:
"All those having business with the court will please step forward. All the rest leave the courtroom."
The woman with the baby hesitated for a minute. Then she stepped for-fore him.

"What can I do for you?" he said, in a kindly tone, while the baby tried to climb over the bar to play with the court's watch-chain.
"I want-I want-my wedding ring,"

"I want—I want—my wedding ring," said the woman, on the verge of collapse. "Hush, baby, hush!"
"Where is it?" asked the justice.
"The pawnbroker has it," said the woman, her sorrow overflowing and a rain of tears flowing down her cheeks and inundating the child in her arms.
"What pawnbroker?" asked the justice

"I don't know his name, but his shop is on Third avenue, near Thirty-third street. My husband died of consumption last week. His name was John Rogers. We buried him in Mt. Calvary cemetery. I pawned the clock and John's overcoat, and—and—all the furniture but the bed—to—to—(sob)—to buy condensed milk for Bobby here, sir, and Friday I pawned the wedding ring. It wasn't worth much, sir, because the gold was washed away at the washboard, your Honor. I never took it off my finger, sir, from the time John put it on ten years are. Oh, I should know it anywhere because the dents of Bobby's teeth were on it, judge, and I got only $1 for it, and I've lost the ticket."

Here Mrs. Rogers stopped. Grief impeded her utterance. The justice took out a handkerchief and blew his nose so loudly that the sleepers in the safety deposit vaults underground were startled into unwonted activity.
"So you lost your ticket, did you?"

"So you lost your ticket, did you?" said His Honor.
"Yes, sir, and I am afraid to go after the ring without it."
The justice took an envelops from a pigeon hole, shoved something into it and handed the envelope to the weening woman. "Take that," said he. "Go to the nearest notary public and swear that your name is Mary Rogers, and that you left your wedding ring with the

"But, judge, I haven't got any—"
"Tat, tut, Mary; do as I say. That's all. The court is dismissed."

Mary and the baby went out beside the great stone pillars again. She opened the envelope and a S5 note flutered upon the pavement. It was raining when Mary stopped into the street, but the sunlight in her heart had dried her tears, and Bobby's face was wreathed in smiles. her tears, and wreathed in smiles.

Do you wish to know the quickest way to cure a cold? We will tell you. To cure a cold quickly, it must be treated before the cold has become settled in the system. The first symptoms are a dry loud cough and sneezing. The cough is soon followed by watery expectoration and the sneezing by a profuse watery discharge from the nose. In severe cases there is a thin white coating on the tongue. What to do? It is only necessary to take Chamberiain's Cough Remedy in double doses every hour. That will greatly lessen the severity of the cold and in many cases will effectually counteract it, and cure what would have been a severe cold within one or two days time. Try it and be convinced.
